COMMENTS FROM THE TOWN MANAGER'S OFFICE

We have received the information from the appraisers as to the values to place on property for 1967. The local assessors have started their work on the books in preparation for establishing a tax rate. It would help a great deal if we were notified at the Town Office of any changes that have been made since last year, especially with regard to personal property. Many did not submit lists to the assessors as the law requires. If any errors appear in taxes to those that do not submit lists, they have no recourse through the law. Therefore, it is important to the taxpayer that he sends a notice of his property.

It would be appreciated if people owing personal and poll taxes would contact the Tax Collector as to their plans for paying. It will soon be time to issue warrants for the collection of these taxes and this increases the cost considerably.

RICKE COLLEGE NOTES: Lack of women students. Rick College is where the boys are. But where are the girls? says Harold L. Erickson, director of admissions as he contemplates student enrollment figures for the opening of school this fall.

We are still accepting applications for fall enrollment. We have a few openings for men, but our greatest need is for women students. There is room for 20 to 25 additional students in our residence halls for women. Normally our ratio for men to women is about three to one. For more reasons the ratio is now running about four to one. We hope that we can attract some of our national quota of men and women students.

Rick College is a fully accredited four-year liberal arts institution in Hackett, Maine. It has grown from 60 students in 1957 to more than 500 students.

TEEN-AGERS BETRAY ADOLESCENCE BY THEIR HANDLING OF CARS

It has been said with considerable justification, that teenagers drive three ways. When with their parents, when alone, and when with friends. It's said that these youngsters, who try so hard to be accepted as adults, betray their adolescence by the way they handle a car. Like everything else in life, respect has to be earned, said Jack Atwood, chairman of the Maine Highway Safety Committee. It is NOT earned by breaking speed laws and making the necks of everyone in your vicinity.

It isn't as though these kids don't know better, said Atwood. When alone they are mostly pretty good drivers, with perhaps some natural youthful cockiness thrown in. Because they are young, they occasionally take chances their older relatives wouldn't dare try, but good reflexes and instinct are on their side. They may push the speed limit some, especially if their dad's do. They may corner faster than prudent with, perhaps, some squealing of tires. And when they make the car to a stop, except at a fast jump on the pedal.

Of course, chairman Atwood continued, when parents are along, the teenage driver's operation of the car is apt to be most exemplary. While parents may be shocked at some of the driving habits their children have picked up, they would be thankful if they could see them at their worst.

You wonder how many parents FNEW their children were tearing down the highway. Half think. You wonder how many were aware that their children FNEW the 300 horsepower family car could really go 100 m.p.h. in less than 10 seconds.

Some parents wonder, too, why their kids are so cocky. Some parents even say they have controlled over their own children at ALL. These parents are right. As the parent and the child is father to the man, but we mustn't forget that the parent is the father of the child. The child is the child of the parent.

SCENE OF SUNDAY ACCIDENT ON MIDDLE INTERVALE ROAD. William Thomas's vehicle is on the left partially hidden by bushes and spectators. The overturned car which was driven by Robert B. Jackson is on the right. Mrs. Louise (Cotton) Jackson's car, which was also damaged, is out of sight behind the two cars.

The parent of a young person has the responsibility of overseeing that youngster's life until the youngster is capable of doing it himself. The safety chairman noted. This includes close supervision of driving, with an appropriate punishment for all known derelictions, such as grounding for a month.

Fortunate are the youngsters who, whether driving alone or in the company of their "friends," has the good influence of a concerned parent riding with them, wherever they go.
